

Reconstructing a medieval garden has been a 30-year labour of love for its Northamptonshire owner

Apples forming on one of the fruit trees in the orchard (top). Deadly nightshade, Atropa belladonna, was a medieval medicine, cosmetic and poison (centre). The geese are free to roam the garden when visitors are not present, otherwise they stay in the Pleasure Park (bottom).