

The vividly-coloured elephant hawkmoth has the long proboscis of most hawkmoths. This allows them to feed on flowers that are tubular in shape with a flared opening, such as this foxglove.