This work is the result of the hard work and dedication of many people. The editor is grateful to the contributors for their efforts and patience.

Special mention must be made to several people at the Harvard Design School, including Dean Peter Rowe, Associate Dean Russell Sanna and Professor Alex Krieger, for their support and assistance both with the staging of the waterfront conference and for this publication. Thanks must also go to Corlette McCoy and her staff at the Harvard Design School Office of Executive Education.

The editor would like to thank the participants of the waterfront conference: Alderman Duco Stadig, President Josu Bergara Etxebarria, Juan Ignacio Vidarte, Luis Rodriguez Llopis, Alderman Bruno Gabrielli, Giuliano Gallanti, Mario Coyula, Vice Mayor Juan José Cardona González, Zhang Hui Ming, Professor Zheng Shiling, John Kriken, Lord Mayor Frank Sartor, Councillor Lynne Kennedy and Larry Beasley.

The editor is also grateful to a number of colleagues who helped in the exploration of waterfront ideas, especially Ed Robbins, Lee Cott, Joaquin Casariego, Elsa Guerra and Elizabeth Mossop who acted as partial reviewers of the work in progress.

Thanks to Victor Lai, Pablo Allard, Kimberley Jones and Aki Omi who acted as research assistants through the course of this research.

Finally, I would like to thank my wife Hele for her support and enduring patience; I am eternally grateful.
