

Edge sub-spaces – niches

An important characteristic of interlocking and 'rugged edges' is the 'sub-space' created in their form. These sub-spaces are small and intimate in character and can be adopted by small groups in public places for diverse social activities. Niche (from the French for 'to nest') is a good descriptive term for this type of edge space.