

- command economics: Second World of Soviet-style, 271
- common ground: environmentalism as, 204; within professions, development of, 45–46, 48–49
- Common Interest Developments (CIDS), 268
- communication: global city as node in network of productive capacity and, 273, 274; revolution in communications technologies, 260, 262; urban symbolism and, 71; Venturi's and Scott Brown's posing of city as semiotic system of, 142
- community(ies): alternative, 171–73; difficulty of maintaining sustainable, 93; gated and guarded, 93, 268, 286; meaning of, 90; Mumford on preserving intimate social structure of, 11; physical formation and maintenance of, as core skills of urban designers, 93
- community activists: as political constituency for implementing urban design concepts, 103
- community advocacy (or doing no harm), xviii5, 127–29. See also advocacy planning
- community model: vanishing, 92
- community planning. See democratic planning and design in Los Angeles
- CommunityViz, 249
- competitions, 313–14
- competition state, shift toward, 271
- Complexity and Contradiction in Architecture* (Venturi), 73, 76, 160
- conceptual stages of projects: visualization tools for, 249
- congestion pricing: for pedestrian-oriented city, 288
- Congrès Internationaux d'Architecture Moderne. See CIAM
- Congress for New Urbanism (CNU), 168, 225n1; charter of, 175–76
- Congress of United States: appropriations for new urban environment, 12, 61, 101
- consciousness: corollaries to, 204–5; increased environmental and ecological, 203–5. See also environmentalism
- conservationism: Mehrotra's reversed strategy in Mumbai and, 193–94
- conspicuous consumption of 1950s, 157
- Constitution Plaza, Hartford, Connecticut, 27
- consumerism: public life and, 317–19
- consumer movement, 158
- contextualism: rise of, 273
- contextualist philosophical model, 142–43, 145
- continuity of experience: Sitte's emphasis on, 140
- "Continuity" (Rogers's Casabella manifesto), 26
- conurbations: growth of, 55
- Cooper, Alexander, 163, 210, 211, 212
- Copper, Wayne W., 152n11
- core: application to decentralizing American metropolitan areas, 24; network of "cores" to re-centralize large urban areas around pedestrian centers, 22–23, 24; Sert's concept of pedestrian urban, 17, 18, 19, 20, 25
- Corea, Mario, 31