

- politan areas, 24; consequences of, Segoe on, 8; regional urbanization and, 263
- decentralization-recentralization trend, 266–67
- decision-making: conveying expertise in era of decentralized, xii–xiii; urban designer’s role in, methods of gaining, 105, 107, 108
- decolonization, 271
- deconcentration, bundled, 272
- Deconstructivism, 68
- “decorated shed,” theory of, 142
- de-familiarization as planning instrument, 147
- default mode of mainstream urban design, 317
- defense factor in city planning: Augur on, 18–19
- defensible space, 268
- “Definitions of Urban Design” (Tyrwhitt), 53–54
- deindustrialization-reindustrialization trend, 265–67
- delight: basic human need for, 98; beauty and delight in contemporary cities, issue of, 279–80
- Delirious New York* (Koolhaas), 146, 147
- DeMars, Vernon, 23
- democracy: urban design as agent of, 141, 148
- Democracy in America* (Tocqueville), 237
- democratic participation: Davidoff’s redefinition of planning process and, 69–70, 75. See also public participation
- democratic planning and design in Los Angeles, 237–52; ensuring inclusiveness, 247; expansion of Los Angeles International Airport (LAX), 238–39, 243; intense and comprehensive process, 241–42; long collaborative development of L.A.’s urbanity, 244–48, 251n4; mandated public input, 242; mixed-use mall in Glendale, 239–40, 243; new roles for planners and designers, 248–51; progress and, 244–45; public planning checks and balances, 242–43; rise of citizen expert, 243–44; Santa Monica hedges, 240–41, 243
- democratic space: public space as, 300–303
- densification, 262–66; of Los Angeles, 262–63, 266; out-of-whack geographical distribution of jobs, affordable housing, and transit facilities created by, 265; regional urbanization and, 263–65; urbanization of suburbia and, 264–65
- density as opportunity for urban design: promoting, 288–89
- Denver, Colorado, Union Station in, 288
- Department of Neighborhood Empowerment (DONE), 242
- design: widening midcentury intellectual split between planning and, 113–14
- designers: new roles in democratic planning and design for, 248–51. See also urban designer(s)
- Design for London, 134
- design professions: thinness of urban design’s intellectual or artistic capital and, 6–7
- design schools: multidisciplinary/