

- Dubai, 93
- Dutch designs for New Orleans, 186–89
- Dyckman, John, 66
- Eames, Charles and Ray, 23
- East Asia, 278; centralized system of urban construction and management married to production-oriented objectives in, 276; modernization and urbanization in, 270, 275–76, 278, 283; at time of 1956 conference, 275–76
- East Bayfront Precinct Plan for Toronto, 219–20
- Eckbo, Garrett, 9, 45, 53, 113
- Eckstut, Stanton, 163, 210, 211
- ecocycle model for recycling, 202
- École des Beaux-Arts technique, 212
- ecology: conceptual centrality of, in production of urban models, 159–60; ecological approach to planning, 202–3; ecological views of city and region, 165
- economy: confidence and optimism in 1956, 255; emergence of “new economy” of flexible capitalism, 260, 262; recession of early 1970s, 256
- edge city, 164
- edgeless cities, 108
- education, urban design: Scott Brown on, 81–82, 84–85; studio methods, 84–85. See also specific schools
- Eggers, Otto, 62
- Ehrlich, Steven, 226n8
- Eisenman, Peter, 215, 216, 219
- Eisner, Michael, 170
- Eliot, Charles, 45
- elites: instances of beauty and delight and, 280
- elitist enclaves for the wealthy: Waldheim on excessive concern with crafting, 232
- Elkin, Stanley, 147
- emancipatory powers of urban collective, 196–97
- Embarcadero Area, San Francisco, California, 102
- empirical observation: city as object of, 229–30
- Emscher Park in Germany, 133, 149, 302–3
- engineering mentality, 11–12
- English New Brutalists, 69
- entertainment: as America’s greatest export, 170
- “entrepreneurial” planning, 268
- entrepreneurship: danger of rampant real estate, 280–81
- environment: urban design and the natural, 104–5
- environmentalism, 158; alternative communities and ethos of, 171–73; change in consciousness and, 203–5; as a common ground, 204; cultural predisposition to new form of coexistence intertwining city and nature, 204; PlaNYC program of environmental responsibility, 287–88; Sorkin on future of urban design and, 181–82; third way for urban design driven by environmental imperative, 201–7
- environmentalists: as political constituency for implementing urban design concepts, 103
- environmental sustainability, 67
- equity, issue of, 261, 274, 289, 290; 1960s and, 170; Scott Brown on reducing inequity, 81; Sorkin