

- Loos, Adolf, 152n10
- Los Angeles: aerial of downtown, 259; Citywalk, 318; decentralization-recentralization of, 266–67; deindustrialization-reindustrialization of, 266–67; density of, 262–63, 266; Department of Neighborhood Empowerment, 247; downtown development in, 266–67; Frank Gehry Grand Street project in, 321; Grand Avenue in, 289; income gap and polarization in, 267; Justice Riots in (1992), 269; Lynch's cognitive map of downtown, 141; regional urbanization process occurring in, 263–65; as suburbanized city, 262; transformation of modern metropolis and emergence of new urbanism demonstrated in, 262–67; urbanization of suburbia around, 264–65; world's largest agglomeration of immigrant working poor in urban core of, 266. See also democratic planning and design in Los Angeles
- Los Angeles International Airport (LAX): expansion of, 238–39, 243
- Los Angeles: The Architecture of Four Ecologies* (Banham), 245
- Louisville, Kentucky: Park DuValle revitalization, 121
- Love, Timothy, xv, 201, 208–26; on Berkeley Investments Fort Point Portfolio, Boston, 221–23, 226n10; on B3 development in Philadelphia, 222–23; on creating friction with real estate development logic and corporate architectural practice, 219–21; on East Bayfront Precinct Plan for Toronto, 219–20; on gentrification producing fine-grained planning, 221–25; on Northpoint, Cambridge, Massachusetts, 216–18, 220, 225n4; on Queens West and Olympic Village, New York City, 214–16
- Lower Manhattan Expressway: defeat of, 159
- Lynch, Kevin, xviii2, 66, 71, 86n21, 91–92, 138, 145, 151n4, 169; critique distinguishing urban design from idea of “city design,” 160; generic evaluative system based on historical European city, 140–41; social science of, 152n6
- Lyndon, Donald, 100n2
- Maas, Winy, 187
- Machado, Rodolfo, xviii3, 129, 232, 235, 291, 315, 316, 321; on Chicago's Millennium Park, 312–13; on commonality of disciplines' techniques, 305; on design education, 311–12; on dispersed city, 320; on involvement of architects (authorship) in urban design, 294, 295, 296; on recent approaches to urban design in U.S., 294; on valuable aspects of New Urbanism, 324
- Maekawa, Kunio, 29
- magnets for public gathering, 295
- Maki, Fumihiko, xiii–xiv, xviii7, 31, 36n41, 88–100, 298; defining urban design, 96–100; learning from Hillside Terrace, 95–96; on legacy of 1956 Urban Design Conference, 89–90; on May Revolution and fall of Berlin Wall, 91–93; on positive and