

- political battle over readmission of inhabitants to, 188
- New Regional Pattern, The*, 229
- New Urbanism, xi, xiv, 68, 83, 118–20, 140, 166; advanced and self-critical agenda, 209; Battery Park City and, 164; Celebration project, 177; flowering of professional cult and culture of, 257; formal orthodoxy of, 176, 179; ideological convergence of Modernist urbanism and, 176; long collaborative development of L.A.'s urbanity and, 245–46; Machado on, 294, 324; no-win dichotomy between posturbanism and, 201–2, 203; place-making and, 122; post-Katrina urban schemes of Mississippi Renewal Forum, 188; problems with, 324; Reaganism and, 174; roundtable discussion on, 321–24; Seaside project, 176–77; social justice and, 176, 180; Sommers critique of urban project approach, 137; Sorkin on, 174–81; sprawl as polemical target of, 180; support and appeal of, 261, 268; Talen on, 184–85; Waldheim on, 232
- new urbanism: metropolitan transformations and the actual, 261–67
- New York: An Illustrated History* (Burns and Sanders), 289
- New York City, 158–64; Battery Park City, xv, 107, 117, 163–64, 315, 316; Brooklyn Waterfront Park, 218, 300; Bryant Park in, redesign of, 309, 310–11, 312; Center for Urban Pedagogy (CUP), 190; Central Park, 300–302; Chelsea Waterside Park, 315; current project for high-rise apartment building in, 98–99; density of, 289; divorce of urban design from social engineering of planning in, 163; DUMBO area in Brooklyn, 320; examples of longer-term vision in, 287–88; form-based street walls and setbacks of original 1916 zoning code, 106; gentrification in, 222; Greenwich Village, 159; as high-end product, Bloomberg on, 236n4; Hudson River Park on West Side of, 309; income gap and polarization in, 267; low cost housing projects, 63; master plan in, 161; Mayor's Task Force on Urban Design (Urban Design Group), 160–64; Moynihan Station in Midtown Manhattan, 288; planning authority given to local community boards, 161; processes of reconstruction in lower Manhattan, 89; public conversation about urbanism in, 313; Queens West and Olympic Village, 214–16; rebuilding of, since 9/11, 91; revised bulk-zoning law passage in 1961, 158–59; special zoning districts, 107; Times Square, 319
- New York State Urban Development Corporation (UDC), 31
- Niemeyer, Oscar, 26, 29
- “Nine Points on Monumentality” (Sert, Giedion, and Léger), 16
- Nolli's 1748 map of Rome, 145; historical circumstance of, 144; view of urbanism, 118, 126
- nomadology, postconsumption, 172
- nongovernmental organizations, 273
- Norquist, John, 188