

- Peterson, John, 195
- Philadelphia: B3 (blocks below Broad Street) in, 222–23; de-stabilization of area around the central district of, 92; Independence National Historical Park, 61; Society Hill, 50; South Street community, 74; urban design phase I shoring up center in, 143; urban renewal, 61, 65; Washington Square, 49, 50
- Philadelphia school, 85n14
- Philip II of Spain, 115
- Phoenix, Arizona, 320
- physical design: as key tool of planning, 248–49
- physical planning, ix
- piecemeal aggregations (urbanistic project), 133
- Pieprz, Dennis, 291; on Bryant Park, New York, 311; on influence of buildings on environment, 294; on Pudong area, Shanghai, 306–7; on redeveloping areas around universities, 316; on South Bay, San Francisco, 316; on success of Central Square, Boston, 296–97; on Turbine Hall, Tate Museum, 307; on Tysons Corner, 322; on University Park near MIT, Boston, 296; on urban design as way of thinking, 325; on urban design presenting different visions for debate, 313
- Piranesi, 118
- Pittsburgh, 14, 301–2; Allegheny Riverfront Park, 300, 301, 307; Gateway Center and Point Park, 61–63; urban renewal, 61–63, 65
- Pittsburgh Cultural Trust, 300
- place-making, 106; Krieger on art of, 120–23; need for, within hectic flow of modern city, 139
- planners and architects: “conflict” or “lack of agreement” between, 281–82; focus of, 12, 13; new roles for, in democratic planning and design, 248–51
- planning: ecological approach to, 202–3; gentrification producing fine-grained, 221–25; urban design as bridge connecting architecture and, 115–16; widening mid-century intellectual split between design and, 113–14. See also city planning; democratic planning and design in Los Angeles
- planning profession, ix
- PlaNYC program of environmental responsibility, 287–88
- Platonic city form, 179
- Playa Vista: master-planned beachside community, 245, 246, 247, 252n4
- pleasure and justice: 1960s and meanings and relationships of, 170
- poche techniques: urban, 211–12
- Point City, South City: Project for Redesigning Holland (OMA), 148
- Point Park, Pittsburgh, 61–63
- polarization: between privatized development and public-space advocates, 216–18; social and economic, 267, 268
- political art of urban design, 150–51
- political constituencies for implementing urban design concepts, 103
- politics, 12; abandonment of, by architectural avant-garde, 180;