

- as distinguishing mark of city, Mumford on, 157–58; insufficient acknowledgement of, 206; negotiation over ratio between private real estate value and public benefits, 217–18; shift to the right in, 174–75, 206; third way for urban design in more explicitly political terms, 206. See also democratic planning and design in Los Angeles
- Pop Art, 15
- populist antiglobal blocs: emergence of, 274
- postconsumption nomadology, 172
- Poster, Mark, 284n7
- postindustrial city: landscape
urbanism's ability to take abject detritus of, as site of imagination, 148–49; postindustrial sites requiring ecologically minded remediation, 223
- postmetropolis: designing the, 255–69; metropolitan transformations and actual new urbanism, 261–67; present trajectories of urban design as distractions from, 267–69
- Postmetropolis* (Soja), 262
- postmetropolitan transition, 262
- Postmodernism, 67, 83
- Postmodern urbanism, 143
- “Post”-Urbanism, 181; no-win dichotomy between New Urbanism and, 201–2, 203
- poverty: erosion of national programs for dealing with urban and regional, 268
- Prairie Shores, Chicago (Skidmore, Owings and Merrill), 51
- pre-design: urban design as, 298–99
- preindustrial city: Nolli map view of urbanism and, 126; restorative urbanism to regain, 118–20
- preservationism, 67, 158, 159;
urban design as kind of prospective, 167
- prisons: subspecialty of building, 268
- private developer. See developer(s)
- private enterprise: retreat from and co-optation of city for ends of, 136
- private-public partnerships. See public-private partnership
- private real estate value and public benefits: ratio between, 217–18
- private-sector parties: collaboration with, 287
- privatization: of public functions, 273; of public sector, 68
- professional alliances: need for new and expanded, 205–6
- professional disciplines: synthesis of, 45–46, 65
- professional involvement in urban design: lack of traditional, 12
- professional practice: increasingly complex inter- and multi-disciplinary context of, 230
- Progressive Architecture*, xiii, 45, 105
- Project for Public Spaces, 218
- project incompleteness, 295
- Provoost, Michelle, xiv–xv, 186–97, 201; on Ditch School of Urban Design, 189–97; on Dutch designs for New Orleans, 186–89
- psycho-geographical urbanism of détournement and derive: Situationist International's, 140
- public, the. See publics
- Public Architecture in San Francisco, 190, 194–95