

- regional urbanization, 263–65
- region as object of design: Lynch on, 141
- regulation(s): finding new opportunities at intersection of real estate development logic and regulatory context, 210; roundtable discussion on issue of guidelines and, 322–23; urban design as form-based public policy through, 116–17; zoning, 106–7, 117, 158–59, 213–14, 224
- reindustrialization, 265–67
- reinvestment strategies for older rings around city centers, 123
- reorganization of everyday life: Sert on, 42–44
- representational technique, 283
- Republicanism and Republican economics, 67–68
- restorative urbanism, 118–20
- retail: Jacobs on function of stores, 9–10; “place-making” by retailers, 106; public life and consumerism, 317–18, 319; redevelopment from industry to leisure through, 320; urban design linked to phased retail lease marketing, 221–23
- reuse of industrial buildings, 299, 300
- Revolt of Masses, The* (Ortega y Gasset), 23
- Riordan, Richard, 238
- Robertson, Jaquelin, 211, 212
- Robertson, Pat, 170
- Rockefeller Center, New York, 21
- Rockefeller Foundation’s Global Summit (2007), 285
- Rodwin, Lloyd, 45, 70, 92, 100n3; at First Urban Design Conference (1956), 6–7, 46–47, 157; view of forces shaping cities, 64
- Rogers, Betsy Barlow, 204
- Rogers, Ernesto, 26, 30, 36nn34–36, 37n46, 43, 56n8
- Rogers, Richard, 306
- Romañach, Mario, 37n47
- Rome, Italy, 276, 277; Campidoglio in, Michelangelo’s redesign, 25, 215; 1800 population, 151n3; Nolli’s 1748 map, 118, 126, 144, 145; Sixtus V’s plan, 61, 115; Stalker’s regeneration of housing block Corviale, 194; urban design as architecture of city, 118
- Roosevelt Island, New York City, 31
- Roppongi Hills project, Tokyo, 96, 97
- Roskam, Cole, 35n24
- Rossi, Aldo, xviii10, 140, 145, 210
- Rotterdam: West 8’s Schouwburgplein, 133, 312
- roundtable discussion at Harvard’s GSD (2006), 291–325; on authorship, 294–96; on bridging the disciplines, 304–6; on Bryant Park, New York, 309–12; on Central Square, Boston, 296–97, 302, 304, 319, 320; on dispersed city, 320–23; on enlightened urban-minded developers, 320; on Hongkong and Shanghai Bank, 293, 295, 296; on lack of new models, 322, 324; on Millennium Park, Chicago, 308–9, 312–13, 314, 315; on New Urbanism, 321–24; on public life and consumerism, 317–19; on public participation, 314–15; on public space as democratic space, 300–303; on successful urban design practice, 297–300, 308–13, 316; on Turbine Hall, Tate Modern,